NEEDS OF ELDERLY PERSONS IN RHODE ISLAND

Part I: Demographic

Numbers of Persons 60 and Older—Urban and Rural

Using 1980 Census numbers updated by the provisional 1990 Census numbers, 180,000 persons are 60 or older, and 11,800 of these are living in rural areas.¹ (See Table 1 below, and Table 3 on page 5.)

¹ The Administration on Aging defines rural as being outside of a SMSA. Nine towns in Rhode Islands are not included in one of the three SMSA's in Rhode Island: Fall River, MA-RI; New London-Norwich, CT-RI; and Providence-Warwick-Pawtucket, RI-MA (Number of Inhabitants, RI, Table 11). Population of Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSA's): 1950-1980. The numbers of persons in age groups are based on the 1980 proportions. These numbers have been increased by the percentage of growth in each township indicated by provisional 1990 census data (made available by the Office of Municipal Affairs within the Division of Planning in the RI Department of Administration).
Poor and Limited English Speaking

According to the 1980 Census, 18,600 of those who are over 60 years old are poor, and less than a thousand of these poor elderly persons are minority. (See Table 2.) Five thousand persons 65 years old or older could speak English either not well or not at all (using a four category ranking: very well, well, not well, not at all).²

² Poverty and rural/urban data are from Table 82, Poverty Status in 1979 of Families and Persons by Race, General Social and Economic Characteristics: 1980 Census. The census used a different definition of rural and urban than that required by the Administration on Aging—described on the previous page and used in Table 3.

In published data (Table 199, in Detailed Population Characteristics: 1980 Census) the age group 60 plus is not used for the tables describing ability to speak English.
