

Want to get back home from the nursing home?

Here's How

The Nursing Home Transition Program and Money Follows the Person program offers support to Rhode Islanders who are interested in returning to the community from a nursing home.

A transition team provides information and support to help a person evaluate their needs, develop a plan of care, and facilitate the transition.

The Nursing Home Transition Team will help:

- Set up home or community services and support.
- Collaborate with a person for goal-setting and care planning.
- Secure housing, aid with applications, and facilitate the move.
- Get essential household items and assistive tech.

Who is Eligible?

Nursing home residents aged 18 or older and eligible for Medicaid may qualify for the Nursing Home Transition Program. There are transition teams to assist people who are directly served through the Rhode Island Medicaid Office and those who are served by a managed care organization.
